When the president asked his auditors if the glory of America would be enhanced by a war of conquest in Mexico, he was answered by shouts of "no," and a similar response was made to his query whether "America's duty to carry self defence to the point of dictation into the affairs of another people." The president said:

Servant of The Feople.

"I have constantly to remind myself that I am not the servant of those who wish to enhance the value of their Mexican investment, but that I am the servant of the rank and file of the people of the United States."

The president dwilt also on his efforts to zerve the whole people, thousands of whom, he said, were appealing to him to maintain peace as long as possible.

World Defend Nation's Honor.

"Of course," he said, "it is our duty to prapare this nation to take care of the least of the prapare this nation to take care of the least of the prapare this nation to take care of the prapare this nation. Why debuts sury part of that, stoopt the detail, except the plan itself which is always debatable?

"Of course it is the duty of the government which it will never overlook to defend the territory and people of this country. It goes without saying that it is the duty of the administration to have constantly in mind with the utmost sensitiveness every point of national honor.

"Hut gentlemen, after you have said and accepted these obvious things, your program of action is still to be formed. When will you act, and how will you act?

"The assiest thing is to strike. The brutal thing is the impulsive thing. No man has to think before he takes aggressive action, but before a man really conserves the honor by realting the ideals of the nation, he has to think exactly what he will do and how he will do it.

"Do you think the glory of America would be enhanced by a war of conquest in Mexico? Bo you think that any set of violence by a powerful nation like this against a weak and destructive heighbor would reflect distinction upon the annals of the United States."

"I want you to know how fully I realize whose servant I am. I do not own the government of the United States even for the time being. I have no right in the use of it to express my own passions. I have no right to express my own ambitions for the development of America. If these ambitions are not coincident with the ambitions of the nation itself.

Great Forces Are Moral Cars.

Tam for the time being spokesman of such people, gentlemen. I have not read history without observing that the greatest forces in the world and the only permanent forces are the moral forces. We have the evidence of a very competent witness, namely the first Napoleon, who said that as he looked back in the last days of his life upon so much as he knew of human history, he had to record the judgment that force had never accomplished anything that was permanent.

Force will not accomplish anything

Force Accomplishes Nothing Permanent

Force will not accomplish anything that is permanent, I venture to say, in the great struggle which is going on the other side of the sea. The permanent things will be accomplished afterward when the cylinion of markind is brought to bear upon the issues, and the only thing that will hold the world attendy by this same allent, instatant, all averatil opinion of markind.

Torce can sometimes hold things steady until opinion has time to form, but no force that was ever exerted except in response to that opinion was ever a conquering and predominant force.

force. Has Respect for Mankind's Opinion. Has Respect for Mankind's Oginlon.

'I think the sentence in American history that I myself am proudest of, is that introductory sentences of the declaration of independence, where the writers say that a due respect for the opinion of mankind demands that they state the reasons for what they are about to do. I venture to say that a decent respect for the opinion of mankind demanded that those who started the present European war should have stated their reasons, but they did not pay may heed to the opinion of mankind and the reckoning will come when the settlement comes.

'So, genilemen, I am willing, no mat-ter what my personal fortunes may be, So, genilemen, I am willing no matter with the personal fortunes may be, to play for the verdict of mankind Personality. It will be a matter of indifference to me what the verdict on its seventh of November is, provided I feel any degree of confidence that when a later jury sits, I shall get their judgment in my favor. Not my favor, personally, what difference does that Make? But in my favor as an honest and conscientious spokesman of a great nation.
